

The FCC should not implement any proposal that would lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy law protections. Indiana's Telephone Privacy law has allowed me to enjoy my time at home while I was on maternity leave. No longer did I get woken up during naps by rude solicitors. In fact, Indiana's law has been so effective that telemarketing calls have dropped significantly over the past several months, even though we've recently purchased a new home. (In the past has caused a marked increase in telemarketing calls due to our mortgage application)
